ALBUM OF RECORDS TO CONFEDERATE MUSEUM

Valuable Data Collected by Colonel James Sample Presented to Daughters of the Confederacy.

Colonel James Sample, of Knoxville, Tenn., the Union soldier, who has been here attending the reunion, and who has done the service to the South of publishing many articles refuting false charges against Southern leaders, yesterday delivered to Miss Mildred Rutherford, of Athens, Ga., historian-general of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, an album containing photographs of the government records and other documentary evidence connected with the relations to the Federal government of the 200 officers who left the United States Army to cast their lot with the forces of the newborn Confederate republic. It was charged that some of these officers drew pay from the Federal government after they had joined the Confederate army and for time that had elapsed after they had joined the latter army. The records show these charges to be false, and Colonel Sample, in a series of articles in a Knoxville paper covering a period of four years, has presented copies and photographs of the records clearing in black and white many a worthy officer of charges which, improbable as they seemed, were nevertheless circulated to the detriment of the reputation of the men concerned and to the embarrassment of many friends who felt in their hearts that the charges were absolutely false, but who did not have the means at hand to refute them.

The album, which is a gift of Colonel Sample to the Daughters of the Confederacy, will be deposited by Miss Mildred Rutherford, the historian-general of the Daughters, in the Confederate Museum.

Colonel Sample, who makes it a business to chase down false reports, said that if anybody was foolish enough to start a rumor that Richmond did not take good care of the convention, he would nail the lie in short order. "In my paper in the Knoxville Journal and Sentinel next Sunday," he said, "I am going to have some good things to say about Richmond and its treatment of the veterans. Watch for Jones."

Sowell on a charge of peddling on the streets without a license, was fined the usual $100 and costs. C. F. Norrell, arrested Wednesday night on a charge of being drunk, and found to be carrying a pistol when he was searched at the First Police Station, was fined $100 and costs. Peter Stokes, colored, was sentenced to jail for ninety days when convicted of stealing a $30 watch from Roland Jones.

Conington.

PUBLIC HEARING ON JITNEY REGULATION

Meeting of Council Committee on Ordinances Is Called for To-Night.

MAY CHANGE PROVISIONS

Bill as Drafted by City Attorney Contains No Provision as to Bond, but Provides Specific Routes—Want Use of Certain Streets Limited.

A meeting of the subcommittee of the Council Committee on Ordinances has been called for this afternoon at 5 o'clock to consider the ordinance that has been drafted by City Attorney Pollard for the regulation of jitney buses. At the meeting this afternoon a few finishing touches will probably be added to the proposed ordinance and the completed product submitted to the full committee, which has been called for a meeting at 8 o'clock to-night.

At the meeting of the full committee tonight the public is invited to attend, and it is more than probable that owners and drivers of jitneys will appear before the committee, some of whom, it is said, will offer suggestions which will help clarify the situation.

The committee was called for a meeting last week to pass on the measure as drafted by the City Attorney, but he tabled the bill and allowed Attorney E. R. Williams, representing the Virginia Railway and Power Company, to make an address on behalf of the company, after which the meeting was adjourned without discussing the new measure.

WANT CHANGES IN GROVE AVENUE ROUTE

The ordinance as drafted by City Attorney Pollard is a compilation in legal form of the regulations decided upon by the committee at a meeting about ten days ago. One of the changes that it is said are likely to be made is the amendment of the Grove Avenue route, which, under the ordinance as it now stands, turns south from Broad Street into Harrison Street. It is proposed to make Laurel Street the cross-town connection of this route.

The Richmond Jitney bus ordinance, in its present form, is a compilation of the regulations of the jitney regulations of San Francisco, Los Angeles, Atlanta, St. Louis and other cities where the jitney has recently sprung up, and which have created special regulations controlling the operation of these cars. The local ordinance, at the same time, embodies a number of original drafts to meet the peculiar problems of this city. One of these is the differential license tax for routes, designed to discourage the overcrowding of certain popular streets, and to utilize the jitney traffic in the East End.

The one point, however, where the Richmond ordinance differs most materially from those of any other city is that it contains no provision requiring jitney owners or drivers to execute a surety bond to protect passengers or pedestrians against accidents arising from the negligence of the jitney drivers.

It is not believed that the regulations will have a clear and unobstructed passage before the full committee, which has been called for a meeting to-night. A public hearing will be held to-night, and others in event that more than one is necessary. The largest objection from the jitney owners, it is believed, will be over the provisions for specific routes, and from which no cars will be allowed to deviate. This expedient was adopted by the committee in order to reduce the objectionable jitney congestion on Grove, Monument and other popular West End avenues.

GOVERNORS OF TWO STATES ATTEND BLUES' BALL

Entertainment at Armory in Honor of Connecticut Foot Guard—Northerners Take Part in Parade.

With the Governors of two States in attendance, Governor Marcus H. Holcomb, of Connecticut, and Governor Henry C. Stuart, of Virginia, the grand ball at the Richmond Light Infantry Blues' Armory last night, given in honor of its guests, the First Company, Governor's Foot Guards, of Hartford, was a largely attended and brilliant affair. Mayor George Ainslie, members of the City Council and other city officials were also present. The huge drill hall, hung with festoons and flags, presented a beautiful scene, with the handsome gowns of the city's most attractive society belles mingled with the red and Colonial uniforms of the Northerners and the blue and white colors of the Blues forming a wonderful color scheme.

The dancing was opened by Major E. W. Bowles, the commanding officer of the Blues. Miss Florence Marvin, daughter of Captain Marvin, of the Blues, led the first dance, following which all the couples present occupied the floor.

The crack Connecticut troops were a feature of the parade yesterday, and received great applause on the line of march. Escorting Governor Holcomb, they occupied a place next the Blues' Battalion, the escort of Governor Stuart. Almost continually during the parade the Foot Guard Band played Southern airs, rendering them so well resonating cheers greeted by many.

The Foot Guards will leave this morning on their special train for Hartford. Many of them have already declared that they will never forget their trip and the Confederate reunion, so well have they been entertained by the Blues.

COMMITTEE ON STREETS FACES VARIED PROGRAM

Important Business to Come Up This Afternoon at Special Meeting.

SOUTHERN WANTS NEW TRACK

May Take Up Question of Route of Proposed Viaduct and Boulevard Connecting City With Ginter Park. Other Items.

The Council Committee on Streets has a varied program awaiting its consideration at a meeting called for this afternoon at 5 o'clock. The Southern Railway wants permission to construct a side track on Dock Street; the Ginter Park Boulevard is up for consideration and City Attorney Pollard is expected to submit his opinion on the application of the Virginia Railway and Power Company for a thirty-year blanket franchise.

The Southern Railway seeks permission to construct a side track along Dock Street, from a point near Fourteenth Street to Seventeenth Street, for the use of many downtown wholesale houses, among whom is Clarence Cosby.

The committee will consider the construction of the proposed Ginter Park Boulevard, for which the Finance Committee has set aside the sum of $75,000 for the acquisition of the necessary property, including a bridge or viaduct from the North Side Greater Richmond. This boulevard is of the first importance to the northern suburbs that became a part of the city with the annexation on November 5, and meets the insistent demand of that section for a convenient highway giving ready access to Broad Street.

NORTHERN SUBURBS NOW MUCH CUT OFF FROM CITY

At present the city is connected with the suburbs, and Ginter Park especially, by means of a devious route following the Brook Turnpike through its course northward and up and down steep slopes of valley and across railroad tracks at grade, and thence by a short cross street to Chamberlayne Avenue.

The northern suburbs have united in demanding a direct extension of Chamberlayne Avenue southward to Broad Street, with a viaduct to carry it across the railroad tracks and the valley over Bacon Quarter Branch. Such a highway would eliminate the dangerous grade crossings and give the northern and northwestern section of the city direct access to Broad Street. Preliminary plans for the viaduct have already been considered by Commissioner Henry P. Beck, of the Administrative Board, who has given the matter much thought. Several meetings have been held in the northern part of the city, seeking to determine the most suitable location for the proposed viaduct.

MANY CANDIDATES

Henrico Promises to Show Old-Time Campaigns for Local Offices.

Henrico County has turned out its full crop of candidates for election at the Democratic primary to be held on August 3. There are three or more candidates for every office that will be vacant on election day, and all these are popular men, enjoying a strong following, which promises to make the political fight that will be waged in Henrico County from now until election time extremely warm.

At noon yesterday the time expired for candidates filing their notices of candidacy with the chairman of the Henrico County Democratic Committee. When the time expired every prospective candidate who had previously announced himself had filed the proper notices and petitions, for such that required petitions, with the chairman of the committee.

From now until election day the candidates will wage a war of words and the contests for the office of treasurer, sheriff and Commonwealth's attorney promise to prove the most interesting, while the fight for the commissions of revenue for both of the districts will also be close.

CONSIDER GAS LEASE

Council Utilities Committee Is Called for To-Night.

The Committee on Public Buildings, Properties and Utilities of the Common Council meets in special session to-night at 8 o'clock to receive the report of the Administrative Board to the leasing of the City Gas Works. The call for the meeting was issued Wednesday by Chairman Tillet, and the board will, at the meeting to-night, submit a complete report, together with all the data that led it to recommend the rejection of the application of the Southern Gas and Light Corporation. It is probable that the report of the board will be tabled, and no business other than receiving it will be transacted.

The clearings for May were $38,756,550, while last year they were only $32,794,013, showing an increase of $5,962,537. Haynes wore a dark suit, black shoes and was of light complexion also.

From the Laurel Reform School there came to the police the report of the escape of another youthful offender.
